I am pleased with Storm's appearance in this issue of the Black Panther. I think the relationship between Storm and T'challa is a beautiful combination of strength and vulnerability . With this said, I still would like to see T'challa' s emotion and internal dialogue a bit more. We received only a glimpse of this in the first three issues. Also, although the exploration of spirituality is an interesting part of the story arc, I would like to see more inclusion of the Wakandan society's use of advanced technology.

Well, there are no dialogue-heavy meetings....so that's a plus.

An interlude of sorts from Coates finds BP battling the Jabari tribe and attempting to reconcile with his ex-wife Storm (of the X-Men). Very little actually happens in this issue. Which might be good or bad....TBD.
