Gorgeous photographs of adorable dogs highlight this coffee-table book of philosophical quotes and thoughts about man's relationship with his dog.

The book is a fast read and I probably spent more time oohing and aahing over the pictures as I did reading the words.

I discovered this book while sitting in the waiting room of our local vet's office. It was a good way to pass the time while waiting for our cats' appointment.

Very sweet meditations and pictures, ranging from "Dogs make us believe we can actually be as they see us" to "What is it with the fetish for dressing up dogs?"

If you love dogs, you will love this book for we dog lovers know how we are inspired by our relationship with our dogs. "Bless the Dogs" celebrates their unquestioning acceptance of us, the moments of laughter, of solace, of mutual reward that make up our companionship. The authors, the Monks of New Skete, raise German Shepherds one of which was the most loving animal I have ever known. The monks have a unique understanding of the nature of all dogs. Their beautiful book - its photography, its message - is a joy.
