The only reason this book doesn't get a lower rating than 2 is the hero, Cole. He was lovely. He made the story worth reading. Drew was annoying, constantly threatening to shoot people. It was as if she didn't know how to do anything else. It got irritating after the first couple of times. It seemed highly unlikely that a man like Cole would fall for her...but, hey, weirder things have happened, right?...Nothing comes to mind right off the bat but I'm sure there's something...Anyway, there wasn't enough dialogue and too much thinking on Drew's part, who, incidentally, accused Cole of thinking too much...go figure. :o) There were some amusing parts, though, so the book really wasn't a total waste of time.

I feel like I am reading a lyrics of a song. A very long song and the lyrics goes with "I'll shoot you" "I'll kill you" or smth like that.... The word shoot has been use a lot here like really... Esp the heroine....

This one was hard for me to rate. I liked the story and the secondary characters and I loved Cole, but I really didn't like Drew. I found her annoying and completely unlikeable. Most of the time I felt sorry for Cole for having to deal with her in any way and couldn't figure out what he saw in her. But like I said above, I really liked that the story took place at a wild west show. You could almost picture yourself sitting in the stands watching the sharp shooting show.
