This padded book with sturdy pages is one that is well suited to be read again and again, which is exactly what I think will happen in your home. It is the story of a little girl's joyful trip to the playground and her adventures as she explores every activity.

I loved this delightful book for some many reasons.

- The joy I found on every page - especially on the little girl's face
- Children spending a day outside and being a "wild one"
- The delightful illustrations
- The similes. For example: "stretching like a cat", "slipping like an eel" and "gulping like a whale". Oh, the discussions you can have as your little one acts out each description!
- The opportunity to discuss vocabulary like "snuggling" and "bounding"
- The coziness on the last few pages as mom and dad tuck her in after her exhausting day

This charming story deserves to be on every child's bookshelf. It's definitely on my shopping list!

Bringing to mind Max from the classic Where the Wild Things Are, this picture book follows a female version of that energetic and imaginative youngster as she makes her way through her day. After an exhausting day of mimicking several animals and moving through various terrain, she finally conks out and sleeps as soundly as a bear might while hibernating. The watercolor and ink illustrations contain much action and show two exhausted parents, loving their wild one but somewhat relieved to have her quiet for a moment. It's interesting to see the toll that having such a boisterous, active child takes on her parents, but clearly they wouldn't have it any other way. My favorite image shows her drinking thirstily, "gulping like a whale" (unpaged). Youngsters will enjoy having this title read to them, and they are likely to try to copy all the animals mentioned in the book just like her.

A little girl acts like various animals throughout her day. It has sort of scribbly, but exuberant, watercolor and ink illustrations. Perfect for toddlers and young pre-school children. First published in Canada.

This sweet little bedtime story is perfect for the “wild one” in your life! Told in a rhyming form, this story follows a little girl on a happy trip to the park. The author uses clever comparisons between the little girl’s playtime actions and familiar animals. Once the reader reaches the end, we learn who the most special Wild one of all is, and end with a calming bedtime message. The text and illustrations fit together nicely-both are of a simplistic, yet sweet style. This story would be a nice addition to the book shelves of younger readers, in the 0-5 age range.

Canadian librarian and writer Jane Whittingham (who you might know from the terrific review blog Raincity Jane) and Canadian illustrator Noel Tuazon have teamed up to bring readers the exuberant, fun and all-around winning picture book Wild One. Written in rhyming couplets- a form in picture books I absolutely adore when done fittingly - Wild One tells the story of a young girl's very busy, very active day, with actions mirroring those of animals. Accompanied by Noel Tuazon's soft yet sunny and bright illustrations, Wild One is a lovely treat.

When we meet the young heroine of our story, she is "in the park, stretching like a cat", then moving on to monkey bars, "hanging like a bat". From the park to the pool, to supper time and snuggling in bed, we follow the little wild one about her dynamic day- well mostly all dynamic! When she has to leave her play time fun and head home with her mom, wild one slows down considerably...but not for long! Wild one goes through her mightily busy day with highlighted actions and activities accompanied by corresponding animal actions (energetically and sweetly brought to life by Tuazon's drawings). In a sweet closing spread, after snuggling down in her bed "like a bear", Wild One ends on a loving and continued happy tone, with the young (now sleeping) girl being wished a good night from her parents.

Overall, a joyful, fun and charming picture book. Perfect for a preschool age and under crowd, I think Wild One would go over tremendously well as a read aloud with busy, wiggly and active toddlers. It could even be used by a willing reader to facilitate an action/movement read aloud with everyone acting out the animal movements in the story! Wild One is a picture book that begs for reading aloud and having fun with, due its ideal compact length, clarity, perfectly fun rhymes, and complementary (adorable) illustrations.

I received a copy of this title courtesy of Pajama Press in exchange for an honest review. All opinions and comments are my own.

Cute book that shows one little girl's busy day. I loved the illustrations. I liked the heavy paper and the padded front cover as well.

A wild romp of a story.

Thoroughly enjoyed this adorable picture book. While the heroine is a female, the fluid illustrations and fun activities she encounters during her day will appeal to everyone. The amusing rhymes and comparisons between children's actions, habits and different animals were on point and sometimes quite hilarious. I can easily see this book as a read aloud for toddlers at story time or a favorite bedtime treasure to be read over and over again. Thanks for the win of this super hardcover. It would make a great gift!

I read this book a bit ago and would have sworn I wrote a review! Well, danged if I can find it anywhere! I thought this book was fun. It was an account of a child's day filled with running around, using their imagination and just having a blast being a kid! Boundless energy! Loved the illustrations, too! So exuberant!

Julie says

This was a really sweet book recommended for 1-4 year olds. The comparisons between children's behaviour/actions and different animals were fun and silly. I liked it a lot, especially the illustrations!

I won "Wild One" by Jane Whittingham in a Goodreads book give a way. I found it very cute with very happy illustrations. I can't wait to give it to my Wild One. Thank you very much!

Dana says

Lovely illustrations, fun, sweet story comparing a child as she goes through her day to different animals. She stretches like a cat, claps like a seal, bounds like a puppy, sleeps like a bear and more.

Tori says

A wild little girl goes through her day pretending to be various animals as she plays. Short, simple. Would be a good addition to a kinetic storytime (where you have the kids act out the words with you). Not much of a story here, so be sure to pair it with something more involved, but a good selection for a large, wiggly group, particularly if they skew younger.
