Randy Gage (<http://www.randygage.com/>) definitely knows his material. He walks the walk and talks the talk. Some other great Network Marketing teachers to follow include: Kim Klaver (<http://bananamarketing.com/>), Tim Sales (<http://www.mlmbrilliance.com/about-ti...>), Todd Falcone (<http://www.toddalcone.com/>), Jeffery and Erica Combs (<http://www.moreheartthantalent.com/>), Jerry Clark (<http://www.clubrhino.com/>), and Jordan Adler (<http://www.beachmoney.com/>). They will strengthen your core energy in Network Marketing and design you to be unstoppable in your goals and action-planning.

Basically, Network Marketing is a legit business model - if approached in the right way. If you are interested in MLM, find a product that is not being heavily marketed in the normal marketing arena. Also, find a product that truly helps and cures people of their ailments. And lastly, find a product that can reach out to others - and be easily marketed and sold.

Have you ever heard of the Moringa Tree? Madonna, the pop star singer, planted several hundred Moringa trees in Africa as a charity - to help mal-nourished children return to optimal health. Within 7 days of eating the leaves of the Moringa tree, the malnourished children were completely healthy and jumping around having fun and enjoying life again. To find out more about the Moringa Tree and what major health organizations around the world are doing to promote this amazing, life-giving tree -- go to: <http://www.jeffries.myzija.com/zijatv...>

Also, check out Dr. Monica Marcu's book "Miracle Tree" for more information on the Moringa and the nutrients this tree provides: <http://mitrecontracting.typepad.com/z...>

This is a great manual for everybody who is new to MLM. I call it a manual because I know I'm going to reread this book often in the coming months. Simply because you need to implement what he teaches at the right time. This is not a book to read, this is a book to use.

Although I am fairly new to MLM, I tend to disagree with the comment that his book is outdated. Personal connection seems to me to be one of the key factors for long term success and you can only get that so far from online channels.

Highly recommended and one to revisit often.

Um livro prático muito bom, porém já começa a precisar de uma pequena actualização

Todavia, continua a ser um excelente manual!

Angela Brooks says*When you want to grow listen to the pro

Great words of wisdom and growth as he grew his business. Great team message to pass down for training. Step the long hard steps follow the pro

Marlene says

Valuable and all true. I'm a single woman, though, and I'm a little leery of inviting near-strangers into my home. Would need to make a plan to have some kind of backup person present, I think.

Tom says

Bit outdated with regards to the presentation stuff, but contained loads of tips and stories and stuff that can be quite useful.

Great insights!

This was a great read for someone who is considering getting into MLM or someone ready to quit one. Read this first!

Rana says

An interesting read but times have passed up the info. If you want to build your biz the old fashioned way with home presentations, this is good. Everything is moving to the internet for me, so I didn't find this as valuable.

Mandla Nyindodo says

A practical step by step guide on how to be a brilliant salesperson. A win!

Chris Lianos says

THE book on the science of MLM (Network Marketing) and what it takes to really get this business off the ground and into the stratosphere. This book was the first I read in the profession and the systems taught by Randy are the cornerstone of my own success. The 4th edition should be out soon. Check in with Randy' site www.randygage.com if you are interested in keeping in the loop.
