Hungry Tales Jonathan Maberry , Tom Weiner (Narrator)

New York Times bestselling author Jonathan Maberry presents a quirky collection of stories starring a whole cast of the ever-popular undead -- including one story written exclusively for Blackstone Audio.

Calling Death: A nonviolent zombie story set in Appalachia

Chokepoint: A semi-sequel to Dead of Night in which four army reservists are assigned to hold a small rural bridge during the early days of the zombie apocalypse.

Pegleg and Paddy Save the World: A zombie story involving a couple of idiot moonshiners, a comet, gangsters, zombies, and the Great Chicago Fire.

The Wind through the Fence: A downbeat psychological drama set in the bleak wastelands a few years after the zombie apocalypse.

**Plus an Exclusive story written especially for Blackstone Audio

With humor and rich storytelling, Maberry brings you zombies as you've never seen them before.

Anne says

5 creepy zombie stories.

Lauren (galacticake) says

Yaaaay, zombie short stories!! I liked nearly all the stories in this book...except maybe the first two were my least favorite. "Pegleg and Paddy Save the World"(sorry, that might not be the 100% accurate title) is an especially funny one. After all, the narrator and his buddy started the Great Chicago Fire, but they only did it to destroy the zombies...and they did it without a single drop of whiskey.

Josh Hilden says

This short collection of stories is absolutely outstanding. I liked all of the tales in this book but my favorite has to be the final story about the Samurai searching for an honorable death.

Ed Adams says

finished awhile back. I've brine a Maberry fan. It's a solid collection.

Laurel L. Perez says

Eh, not particularly my thing. Decent little shorts, only one of them really kept me interested, but worth the quick perusal.

---

Darcy says

If you like zombie tales, this one is full of them and fun to read and they don't go the way that you think.

Rusty says

The first couple were pretty forgettable. But the last two were strong.

---

Grant says

Pretty boilerplate stuff.

Richard says

5 good short stories.
