The Secret Diamond Sisters Michelle Madow
Three sisters. One billionaire father. What could go wrong?

Savannah. Courtney. Peyton.

The three sisters grew up not knowing their father and not quite catching a break. But it looks like their luck is about to change when they find out the secret identity of their long-lost dad -- a billionaire Las Vegas hotel owner who wants them to come live in a gorgeous penthouse hotel suite.

Suddenly the Strip's most exclusive clubs are all-access, and with an unlimited credit card each, it should be easier than ever to fit right in. But in a town full of secrets and illusion, fitting in is nothing compared to finding out the truth about their past.

Tiffany (About to Read) says

In true Gossip Girl fashion, Madow throws us into Las Vegas' sparkling lights with a billion dollars and pretty much no rules. If you love stories about the high life, you won't want to miss it. Madow goes above massive shopping sprees and crazy parties though and gives us more: three sisters from a broken family who find out that their long-lost father is a hotel tycoon. I am a huge fan of sister stories, and unlike several novels that just can't seem to understand what sisterhood means, Madow nails it.

Savannah, Peyton, and Courtney have been through a lot. While I related to Courtney the most, Peyton's stories about dealing with her mother's crap and trying to shelter her sisters from everything that went on was something that I could definitely relate to. I am the oldest of 4 and there have been times when I've tried to shield my younger siblings from something. Peyton's courage with being in such a horrible atmosphere is personally something that I thought was fantastic.

?Then there is Courtney, who responsible as always, gets a job to help pay bills. And Savannah, who is very naive. She has had two older sisters out there to help protect her from her mother. She knows it was bad, but she really has no idea exactly how bad it was. She's a dreamer, carefree, and kind of irresponsible. Definitely the hardest character for me to relate to, but she's also very forgiving and I admire that. It can't be easy to accept someone into your life who you felt abandoned you, but Savannah does that. It takes a really special person and definitely some maturity to recognize that there are two sides to every story, and maybe her Dad's side doesn't suck.

The things that the girls have gone through with their mother have caused them to form an unbreakable bond. No matter who tries to come between them it won't work. And I love that. No sisters fighting over the same boy here (because seriously, nothing makes me want to throw a book across the room faster). The Secret Diamond Sisters actually made me cry. Some people will surely say I'm over sensitive, but those scenes about their alcoholic mother broke my heart. Every. Single. Time.

As much as I loved the glamour, the gritty back story, and the sisterly love, this series clearly has a lot more in store for us. I am expecting some heart stopping secrets to come out of the next novels. I mean, there is clearly more to Adrian's story. I'm excited to see Savannah develop and mature. And Peyton. Oh Peyton. She is such a stubborn, trouble maker, but I am sure she will keep us entertained :)

Where over the top, high-life stories typically fail to deliver, Michelle Madow excels. Instead of spoiled princesses and people who let wealth go to their heads. We have three sisters who have struggled and dealt with a lot in their lives before being thrust into the limelight. Three sisters who are learning to heal after finally meeting their father. And three sisters who love each other more anything. Tip of the hat to Michelle. Now go pick it up and tell me what you think :)

Nemo (The Moonlight Library) says

I can't really talk about this novel without spoilers, but it's okay, because there's not really a plot, just a love dodecahedron.

The Secret Diamond Sisters is the story of what happened when three sisters from the poor side of town find out their long-lost dad is a billionaire hotel owner, and are uprooted to become Las Vegas' hottest new princesses/heiresses, when their alcoholic mother goes to rehab.

The problem with The Secret Diamond Sisters is that there's not really a plot, it's really just the romantic mishaps of the three sisters as each gets embroiled in their own love triangle. There's really no plot involved, no bigger storyline than their love lives, and because of that there's no climax, which from the books I've been reading recently seems to be the 'in' thing nowadays, cutting out a proper climax in the hopes that Book 1 of a series will draw readers into Book 2.

I can't really discuss plot, because there's not one. But I can discuss character.

I'll start with Peyton, whom we're as a group supposed to hate, or at least dislike. Most obviously because she doesn't like reading, which when you put into a book always means we're not supposed to like the character because we the audience like to read. Peyton's the eldest of the sisters and is a walking disaster. She's vulnerable and rebellious and has a 'fuck you' attitude to hide her own insecurities.

She dithers between two different boys, Oliver and her new bodyguard. Neither wants her, and she cheats on her actual boyfriend back home in Bumfuck Nowheresville with one of them trying to make the other jealous. She's a mess, but by the end of the book at least she straightens out a little bit, realises her mistakes, and vows to protect her sisters from making the same mistakes.

Courtney is the middle sister and the darling of the novel. She's a hard worker, selfless, awkward around boys, and we're supposed to love her because she's a big reader (and actually spends time reading) and wants to travel. Courtney's not interested in boys, she doesn't have time for them because she wants to go to college and needs excellent grades for a scholarship. When Daddy hands over a credit card and tells her she can spend it on anything but a yacht, basically, she still struggles to spend any money she hasn't earned herself, and even applies for a job in the hotel (which she is yelled at for, how rude!).

Courtney's cornered by Oliver, who's made a horrible bet that he can seduce and sleep with each of the sisters before school starts, but she secretly longs for her future step-brother, Brett. Eventually she takes a risk and of course we don't know how it actually pays off because the novel just ends.

Savannah is the baby of the sisters, she's fifteen and embodies all a vapid, self-obsessed, sheltered teen girl does. She's boy crazy, an attention whore, and loves to be admired, but even though she's musically gifted she gets terrible stage fright. Savannah loves being in Vegas and spending all the money she never has, and she's convinced that if she gets the right look (makeover time!) and buys the right clothes she'll finally be popular and wanted, like her best friend back home.

Savannah latches on to the first hot boy she sees in Vegas, Damien, whose intentions I never quite grasped. He seemed sweet enough, but when he started getting hot and heavy with Savannah on the second day they met, Savannah actually wonders if she should have just had sex with him, because he's not going to be into her if she doesn't.

Eventually a girl called Madison (we'll get to her) ruins Damien's chances with Savannah and she latches on to the first boy she bumps into, Nick, who's Madison's ex, and the two get along really well, like brother and sister. Also, this relationship also goes nowhere because the book finishes before anything becomes official, although you can pretty clearly guess what's going on between Nick and Savannah.

Madison, mentioned above, is a surprise fourth point of view. With the book called The Secret Diamond Sisters I kept expecting some kind of plot revelation that Madison as the mysterious fourth long-lost half-sister, but that never happened. I'm pretty sure we only got Madison's point of view because she's a massive bitch who's convinced the Diamond sisters are out to ruin her life because they keep drawing the attention of all the guys Madison is used to reigning over. Madison is crushing on Brett (Courtney's), while her BFF Oliver sleeps with Peyton and dates Courtney, and her maybe-crush Damien is entranced by Savannah.

Madison's character is quite well developed, maybe the best developed of the four point of view characters, but she's a massive drama queen, an alcoholic, and obsessed with her looks, as well as declaring the Diamond sisters her nemesis for no real reason except that she seems to love the drama and attention, probably because her own parents are neglectful of her. Despite the confusion of Madison's included POV, I actually really enjoyed reading her sections. It did reveal parts of the story we wouldn't otherwise have known.

Overall I did enjoy reading The Secret Diamond Sisters. The descriptions of Las Vegas hotels were really beautiful, I really felt immersed in the book seeing as how my only exposure to Vegas is CSI: Las Vegas and that time in Friends Ross and Rachel got married. The lack of plot won't bother those who simply want to read about three poor girls who suddenly have the world at their fingertips and all the boys they could possibly imagine.

My one criticism is the use of alcohol: Although Madow uses lots of fake ID, so many of the teens are heavy drinkers, and I know the drinking age is 21 in the US. I don't doubt it actually does happen, but I personally would have thought the three sisters (especially Peyton) would have had more respect for the drug that destroyed their mother (whose own storyline also remained unfinished). I also would have loved to have seen more sisterly interactions, especially the sisters being protective of one another and not simply thinking it.

Sometimes I'm 100% in the mood for a book that doesn't take itself too seriously. The Secret Diamond Sisters was 100% sparkly, escapist fun.

Three teenaged sisters are plucked out of obscurity and taken to live with their casino mogul dad in Vegas. Yes, a lot of this is pure girly wish fulfillment: "Hey- I'm your long lost father. Here are three Black Amex cards; go have fun!" But I have to say, I did come to like all three sisters. There's rebellious Peyton, responsible Courtney, and naive Savannah, all of whom react to their new lives in different yet believable ways.

There are other characters, too, many reminiscent of those in Gossip Girl. There's a smoking jacket wearing high school playboy -- hello, Chuck Bass! There's a fashion-obsessed girl in love with a guy who seems oblivious to her infatuation - hello, Blair Waldorf! There's a public school transfer who thinks all these spoiled kids are beneath him -- hello, Dan Humphrey! There's also a blog (XOXO!!) that comments on all the goings-on at the beginning of each chapter. But it's a formula that works, if you like that kind of story. I'm not going to lie: sometimes I really do.

Yes, I felt there were some credibility issues -- there usually are in a story like this. Not in the amount that this group of teens drinks and hooks up, which I (sadly) think is probably accurate. But I found it very hard to believe that a major, upscale Las Vegas resort owned by a guy who claims to be VERY worried about bad publicity would let all these high school kids -- including his own daughters -- drink so freely on the premises. Their father is like: "Don't ever embarrass me in public, but that martini you're drinking? No prob. Cheers!"

The book leaves things very open-ended, and there are plenty of things to be explored in further books. There's love geometry that's so complicated, I'm not sure how to describe it -- a love pentagon (?) that includes step-siblings AND sisters. Maybe I'll attempt a diagram for my blog review. I definitely sense some drama brewing among the adults. And the first book takes place in summer, so the Diamond sisters haven't even started high school -- a place where drama abounds....

If, like me, you've been sort of missing the crazy shenanigans of the Gossip Girl gang, you should definitely give Secret Diamond Sisters a try.

Thanks to Harlequin Teen for allowing me to read an advanced copy of this book!

(I received this book from the author herself for review, and this does not change my opinion or anything else.)

This book is just another 9O21O episode written through a book. I was absolutely disappointed throughout the book. It started and ended blandly. However it did quite entertain me as I read the book.

One thing that really helped this book: multiple POVs. I really don't like having third person point-of-view when it's in a multiple point-of-view. But I guess the author rocked it and it's the only thing that helped the author shine bright like a diamond. (heh)

It had been compared to be the next Gossip Girl/ Princess Diaries, but all I see is disappointment. It didn't live up with the hype. There are a lot of flaws and room for improvement that I just wish could've been rewritten.

Savannah is fifteen. Savannah is a flirt. Oh, God. There are many ways that could've go wrong, but she having an intimacy with an older guy who probably had an intercourse with somebody else is very, very wrong. How stupid can teenagers be, seriously?

Courtney is what? Sixteen? And is probably the most mature of them all sisters. I salute her for being the role model. She is probably the most likable character in this book.

And lastly, Peyton. The most immature character but everything changed in the end. As we all know, the three sisters have different characteristics. Savannah being the girly-girl. Courtney being the responsible woman. And Peyton being the boyish/goth woman.

Also, don't forget their dad who is a multi-millionaire who is also a failure. Talk about the worst family that you could ever imagine. Rich dad, poor soul. Drunk mom, sick body. Let's clap our hands to the parents of the year. Well at least the dad is rich; let's give him that.

There were some words I was hoping for to pop up on the pages. Like a good quote for the readers to reflect on, but it's all concentrated on the story and the characters. Every chapter is almost always talking about getting the boy or the girl, the clubs, the Diamond family, and the good-looking couple. What good can I even get from this story?

Let's talk about pacing. The pacing is smoothly good and I have nothing to complain about. But the choice of words used in this book I have problems with. There were no complexities and such. Everything felt dragging.

If you like chick-lits, give this one a go. Well, it had some great reviews too. And if you want something mind-blowing, I strongly do not suggest this one.

I don't know what to say. I'm speechless. More so because I had to take multiple naps while reading this (or trying to) before I finished it. The Secret Diamond Sisters could have been an amazing novel that's light-hearted and fun but instead what I got was mindless crap that either didn't make sense or was too boring for me to care about.

The characters are so very flat and annoying. They say the same things over again and they all seem to share one stupid brain. I couldn't stand any of them and what made everything worse are the romances which, for the life of me I could not give two fucks about. They're so boring, and the love interests are so one-sided and are only there to compliment the girls and they're just worse than a brick wall. I also really disliked the writing because it felt too simple to me and I couldn't connect to it or anything.

I'm giving this book .5 because I really liked the idea of it. I hated everything else which is sad because this could have been a fun novel. The Secret Diamond Sisters is a huge disappointment for me. I pretty much disliked everything about it yet this novel could have been really good. I don't recommend this one to anyone, it's boring, annoying, and predictable.

I've been obsessed with gossip girl-esque books since I was 13 ok?

Let me say it again just to be clear, I've been obsessed with gossip girl-esque books since I was 13

Ok so I LOVED this! Reading this felt like I was 14 again and it was so trashy and light and juvenile I loved it I'm guilty.

Honestly this reminds me soooo much of The Carlyles aka my fav series back when I was 14. Savannah reminded me of Avery, Peyton reminded me of Baby, Courtney reminded me of Owen and Madison as Jack. I loved it and this book actually cured my slump!!!

Idk man something about rich teenagers backstabbing and making out with each other is fun.

So there are 4 POVs, 3 of the sister and the other one is from their frenemy

?1.Savannah?

-The youngest of three, 15 year old, classic ESFP.

-She's naive, gullible, and easily impressed.

-falls in love with any guy that looks her way

-wants!! to!! fit!! in!!

-I!! want!! to!! be!! popular!!!

-shallow as hell but nice so it's ok

?2.Courtney?

- the responsible, smart, 16 year old middle child
- boring
- b o r i n g
- watching paint dry is more fun than reading about her
- goody two shoes introvert who likes books and sat classes and their future stepbrother
- I!! need!! to!! get!! to stanford!!

?3.Peyton

- The oldest, rebellious, headstrong 17 year old.
- my twin basically
- a queen
- the best character to read about
- my fav
- punk af and gives 0 shit about fitting in with the other kids in vegas
- rebels!! all!! authority!!

?4.Madison?

- the envious, rich, attention-seeking, popular girl
- yawns
- classic mean girl trope
- dumps the sweetest guy ever for some boring ass dumb ass pasty ass artsy dude
- probably anorexic
- Notice!! me!!

?Overall?

Give me the next book and let me binge that trash like I did this one. thanks

Fans of Gossip girl and the A-list series will devour 'The Secret Diamond Sisters'. The whole novel took place only over about a week but my god, the drama is more than most people have in a year. It was an amazing look into Las Vegas and in the Q&A in the back Madow says she visits Vegas every year so her expertise really shines in the novel. I am a bit of a sucker for a rags-to-riches story simply because I like seeing how the characters change and develop in such a environment and I think Courtney, Savannah and Peyton have done just fine so far.

Courtney, Savannah and Peyton are complete polar opposites of each other in every way possible. Courtney is the responsible bookworm, Savannah is the naive one who is easily sucked into the world of glitz and glamour, while Peyton is the brooding 'badass'. I actually liked Courtney and Savannah but Peyton was incredibly unlikeable. I get that they've been dealt a bad hand but her attitude was unnecessary. Courtney and Savannah on the other hand I actually enjoyed reading about. Courtney, because I identify with her most and Savannah, because she acted pretty much how I think I would if I was suddenly rich and could buy anything I wanted.

I didn't realize I missed having a Gossip Girl-esque series to read as a mindless, fun time but 'The Secret Diamond Sisters' showed me I really was! I think teens will eat this up and it could become the next generations Gossip Girl.

It breaks my heart to write this review. I feel like I'm about to rip the book to shreds, and that saddens me. I actually met the author (very, very briefly) at BEA last year. She was SO SWEET and so excited about her upcoming book, The Secret Diamond Sisters. When I saw what it was about, I was excited too! It sounded AMAZING! Now, months later, I've finally read the book and I didn't like it... and that really upsets me. :(

There are two big problems with The Secret Diamond Sisters : the characters and the plot.

The Characters

I hated two of the three characters. Courtney was actually pretty cool, but Savannah's naivety made her annoying, and Peyton's bitchy attitude made her unbearable.

Savannah

Compared to Peyton, Savannah wasn't so bad. Her main problem was that she was a 15 year old girl obsessed with being popular and looking amazing. I know a lot of 15 year old girls are like that, so the portrayal is pretty accurate. But the way she acted really made me roll my eyes sometimes.

[Now Savannah] could be more than Evie's second-best. She could buy the expensive bags and shoes the cool girls flaunted around school, so she wouldn't feel like an outsider. She would finally fit in—more so once she got her new wardrobe, highlights and hair extensions.

Of course, this Savannah Diamond needed the hottest, most desirable boyfriend by her side.

SO many teenage girls think this way. They feel they have to do everything they can to fit in, and appearances are everything. Even if this is an accurate portrayal, it didn't make it fun to read about. It's hard to like and admire a main character who doesn't have the self confidence to just be who she is, without needing expensive clothes or popular friends or the hottest look. And I don't feel like she ever changed, even towards the end, so that made it all the worse.

Then the other annoying parts come in when Savannah gives into peer pressure. The girl is 15 and she tried alcohol once and didn't like it. She also avoids hard alcohol because her mother is an alcoholic. Then a hot guy invites her to do shots and she accepts, even though she doesn't want to, because she wants to fit in and be cool. Well that is not cool!!

But Savannah wasn't about to argue with Damien. She would stop at one and pretend she didn't mind the taste when it was setting her throat on fire.

So even though she doesn't want to do it, she drinks anyway. Not cool, Savannah.

This goes a step further when Damien advances on her sexually, Savannah pulls back, then sees that Damien is upset, and Savannah believes she was being stupid and "should have gone along with it". That's basically a roundabout way of saying, "I didn't want to have sex, but clearly he's upset so I should have sucked it up and gone with it." That's one step away from letting a guy rape you. Dear Savannah: it's okay if you don't want to let a guy feel you up! Especially if you only met the guy YESTERDAY! There's nothing wrong with not wanting it.

Then there are a few other scattered instances of Savannah getting overly "made up", like putting on makeup to go to the gym in case she sees Damien there. Do girls seriously put on makeup when going to the gym? Nothing is wrong with having an un-made-up face while you work up a sweat (or even just on a normal day out...)! All these things combined just made Savannah look so materialistic, all about appearances, and very naive.

Peyton

Peyton was the "rebel". She desperately wanted to go against the norm, and once she learned about her dad she decided she hated him and had to piss him off as much as possible. Fair enough, because the guy wasn't involved in most of her life so I get why she was pissed off, but Peyton took it a few steps too far for me to handle. Here are a few of the ways she tried to piss off her dad:

Peyton skimmed over the menu as Rebecca ordered her food, zeroing in on the most expensive dish on the menu. Maine lobster—seventy dollars. Perfect. That would do a good job of pissing Adrian off.

The dude is a BILLIONAIRE. A seventy dollar food item is not going to make him bat an eyelash. But the fact that she thought it would and went ahead and did this was my first real sign that she was a stupid brat. I don't like people who go out of their way to do stupid stuff like this.

[..] so Peyton turned to Brett with a brilliant idea—flirt with her future stepbrother. That would surely piss Adrian off.

This was about 4 pages later... just... seriously? Then about 10 pages later she started flirting with her bodyguard too. She's just toying with guys to piss off her dad. THAT'S NOT COOL!

Then, later, Adrian gave them the rules of the house. Which were more or less:

- * You can use your unlimited credit cards for anything you want. But if you're going to buy a yacht or something, you need to talk to me first.
- * Don't cause any bad press.
- * You can drink alcohol despite being underage, just don't go overboard and like, black out.
- * You can go clubbing and you don't have a curfew, just come home at night.

Peyton's reaction to these ridiculously lenient rules?

[Peyton] was sick of listening to this lecture. She ignored the rules at home, especially since her mom didn't follow through with punishments, and she would continue doing whatever she wanted here, no matter what boundaries Adrian tried to place on her.

Yeah, because these "boundaries" are sooo unreasonable... At this point she was just looking for ways to cause conflict. THERE'S NOTHING HERE TO ACTUALLY BE ANNOYED ABOUT!! The dude is giving you loads of freedom.

Adrian is engaged to a woman named Rebecca, and one day she came to the girls explaining that they were attending a dinner party and they should dress up and look nice. So naturally Peyton decided to be a bitch about it.

"I'm going to get ready, and I'll make sure to pick an outfit that definitely wouldn't have met Rebecca's approval."

Then she proceeded to put on a see-through outfit that was totally inappropriate for a nice, business dinner party.

Plus, I hated how Peyton acted around guys. Before the story starts, Peyton was cheated on, and it destroyed all her future relationships. She hated it, she was humiliated, she was devastated. Then, naturally, she cheats on her own boyfriend.

Peyton didn't like how she'd cheated on [her boyfriend], but it was nothing that hadn't been done to her before.

Just because it happened to you (with a different guy) doesn't mean it's okay for you to do it.. Don't you remember how upset and devastated you were?

After she was cheated on, she decided to never let a guy get close to her. She dated a new one every month (or less), had one night stands, etc. Once the guys got too close, she pushed them away. Then, in the book, she has sex with one guy and thinks now they're kind of dating.. but the guy basically told her that wasn't the case. Then Peyton was pissed because HE was the one to end things instead of HER and:

"she was the one who ended things with guys, not the other way around."

Yes, how awful that he got the draw on her and broke it off first.

Overall, Peyton was a massive bitch. She did things to her dad just to try to piss him off, and they were so stupid and unnecessary. Then she was a massive hypocrite when it came to guys. She was allowed to break their hearts, but they weren't allowed to break hers. Awesome logic.

The drinking—is this real?

The girls in this book are fifteen, sixteen, and seventeen, if I remember rightly. All the people who they hang out with are around that range as well. But EVERYONE drinks. ALL THE TIME. Enough that I'm pretty sure one of the seventeen year olds had a legitimate drinking problem (he constantly carried around a flask to drink from and got hammered like every day).

I mean, this is Vegas, so maybe this does really happen.. but I was floored by the sheer amount of underage drinking and lack of carding at the clubs. Maybe that's a real thing in Vegas. Maybe sixteen year olds really do go clubbing at 18/21+ clubs every night, never get carded, and always do tons of shots. I don't know. But geeze. It seemed unreal to me. At least Savannah had the sense to start ordering sodas after her little peer pressure shot escapade.

The Plot

The other problem with The Secret Diamond Sisters was the lack of plot progression. Nothing actually happens in this book. There's not really a big story arc. The entire book is just about the three girls running around Vegas and each experiencing it a little differently. Naturally they each have their romance dramas, but that's it. Nothing actually happens with their dad. There was no climax. Nothing gets revealed at the end. And apparently this book is a series, but I was given no indication of where the series was actually heading.

If you like the idea of a book that's about three different girls having different romance dramas, then maybe you'll like The Secret Diamond Sisters. I thought I was liking it for a while, but when I realized that none of the stories were actually heading anywhere, I got bored. I finally realized that there was no more to the story than what I was getting. It's just about one girl (Courtney) falling for the one guy she can't be with, another girl (Savannah) falling for the playboy who is less into her than he appears to be, and another girl (Peyton) falling for her one night stand. Then see where that all leads (nowhere, really).

Wow! This book was so much fun. It made me feel like I was living it up on the Las Vegas Strip right along side with Peyton, Savannah, and Courtney. The three Diamond sisters are each so unique. The book was split up into multiple different characters views. The chapters each alternated between the diamond sisters and the resident "it" girl at their soon to be high school, Madison. There were also little sections scattered throughout from a school online website, where people were posting rumors and things that were going on. It reminded me of part Twitter, part Gossip girl blog. I thought it was a perfect add in to the atmosphere that the Diamond sisters found themselves living in.

Peyton, Courtney, and Savannah are uprooted to live with their absentee father in Las vegas, and overnight their whole lives changes. I appreciated how well the girls each handled this huge change. Sure Peyton was a little grumpy, and sure Savannah was a little spend happy with all of her new money, but I thought overall, they handled themselves really well in this tough situation. I also thought that the celebrity lifestyle was portrayed to a t! Michelle Madow did such a fantastic job creating an atmosphere that seemed to realistic to how teenage/celebrity lifestyle seems to be. It is like the Las Vegas Gossip Girl. I ate it all up.

I really liked all of the Diamond Sisters because they were each so different and I feel like we got to know each of them really well, but if I had to rank them I like Courtney the most and Peyton the least. Courtney seemed like the most level headed of the three and i thought she made the best decisions overall. I liked Savannah, but I wish she was just one year older. She seemed so young at just 15, and everything she was doing just made her seem so much older. I think that is why I like the idea of her with Nick because he seemed to treat her the best. Peyton just seemed like such a sourpuss all the time and in some ways she acted the most immaturity. I understand where she was coming from, but attitude still bugged sometimes. At the end of the story, I started to get a glimpse of a much nicer Peyton, and that made me like her a lot more.

And then there is Madison. I have no idea what to think of her. I guess she was the "mean girl". And by I guess, I mean that she can be one heck of a B, but for some reason, I just want to believe her soft underbelly. I'm still deciding on who the real Madison is. I will have to get back to you on that one after I read the next book. And you better believe, I will be reading the next book. I am hooked on the world of the Secret Diamond Sisters and I can't wait to go back for more.

Blood stains, ball gowns, trashin' the hotel room,
We don't care, we're driving Cadillacs in our dreams.”

Three Californian girls who have never known their father come home one day to find out their alcoholic mother has been moved to a rehab center... and for the time being, they will live in Las Vegas, sin city, with their billionaire father Adrian Diamond, owner of the biggest hotel franchise in the country.

In a day, Savannah, Courtney and Peyton are the latest stars of the tabloids. Life at the Diamond is everything a girl could dream of. They'll start at the most elite school in California in the fall and they have the summer to live it up in a Vegas penthouse, American Express cards in hand.

But not everyone is excited about the Diamond Sisters' arrival at the Diamond hotel. In fact, someone in the hotel is ready to exposé the girls with the click of a mouse and send them out of the Diamond hotel, the hearts of the boys they've kissed, and the nightclubs they've danced in. And back into their old life.

Michelle Madow has followed in the platinum heel-steps of Cecily Von Zeisgar, Sara Shepard and Ally Carter in what seems like the first season of the Diamond girls' romantic,shocking and lavish lives. The ending sets up perfectly for “season 2” and the luxury and sin of The Secret Diamond Sisters will make everyone wish that they were the heiresses of a billionaire... unless, of course, the curtain falls.

Well, all I can say is... If you want to feel like you're living in a modern-day fairy tale, this is the book is for you.

I felt hooked from the very beginning (you're thrown right into the action alongside the Diamond girls) and it's exciting but you also feel the tension of what it would be like to be uprooted suddenly from everything you know. And then, as things progress, you really feel whisked away into another life where the whole world is suddenly open to you - and your only limit is how willing you are to let go of your past... And with a chance to start over in LAS VEGAS, how could you resist??

The descriptions of the Vegas Strip and all its colorful clubs and casinos really made me feel like I was there; even if you haven't been to Vegas before, you get a sense of how extravagant and theatrical it is. Everything is dazzling, and everything is a show. There's really no place like it in the world. And you find yourself wondering what you would do in the same situation...

I also really enjoyed how different each of the Diamond sisters were and how I can totally relate to parts of their individual personalities. Savannah is so sweet and hopeful, and Courtney is so driven and motivated, and Peyton is so strong in her convictions. And what also makes the girls very relatable is that they aren't perfect and they make mistakes, but they also learn and grow and make the best of what would be a very difficult situation.

The author also deals very delicately with the subjects of alcoholism, cancer, the absence of a parent, and what life is like for teenagers who have to largely support themselves (which is something that many people are familiar with). But even when I was empathizing with what the Diamond sisters had had to live with, it was wonderful to see how they support each other throughout the story - a family like that is really nice to read about. You can tell that the girls will be there, together, no matter what life throws at them.

Add to all of this a good dose of romance and intrigue (so much drama, it was so exciting!) involving new “friends” (maybe more like “frenemies”) and some (potentially) scandalous business dealings surrounding the girls’ father, Adrian Diamond, and his mysterious past... And you have the makings of a really great series to follow a book that is just a lot of fun... I can’t wait to see what happens to the Diamond sisters next!! <3

This book was a little shallow, and juvenile but it was so much fun to read. It is exactly what I needed. A light fun read. Kind of like Gossip Girl. I started it last night and couldn’t put it down.

This is the story of 3 sisters Peyton, Courtney, and Savannah. They have to move in with their dad that they don’t know because their mom had to go to rehab. They find out their dad is rich and owns hotels in Vegas and they are moving in. Peyton is a little goth and moody and wants to make things hard for her dad. Savannah is the youngest and most naive however she adjust the quickest, and Courtney is smart and follows all the rules. She is the responsible one. That is until she arrives in Vegas.

Along with their points of views you get the mean girl Madison. She is so manipulative. But it wouldn’t be a great book without a villain.

Looking forward to book 2!

For the longest time, I’ve had my eyes on this beautiful chick-lit series taken in one of the most wildest cities in the world—Vegas. Three secret heiress sisters arriving in the city for the first time? That’s a world that’s definite clung to partying and wild romance. Now that I’ve finally gotten a chance to read this, I must say that there’s no book in the world that’s like or even close to The Secret Diamond Sisters’s stunningly-built world.

This book isn’t for everyone. If you’ve read other reviews, you probably noticed that a lot of them are negative. I must say that I’m against the negativity. I understand and don’t understand why, all at the same time. This is a full-out gorgeous chick-lit with drama and perfection, just like a mix between The Bachelor’s drama and Titanic’s romance. It’s that strong. But people have noted that this book didn’t “have a point.” I really am all o_O when reading those thoughts—but it’s their opinion, right?

Hmmph. Anywho—I’d seriously recommend staying away from that negativity. DON’T LET IT SCARE YOU. This book is friendly, this book is feisty with love, but it’s amazing and one of my favourite books of all-time.

Like I noted, this is about three sisters, aka The Secret Diamond Sisters? Yes, the title seriously matches them—I love it! Savannah, Courtney and Peyton are three sisters living in northern California with their alcoholic mother who doesn't know how to control her addiction. Everyday, they fear for their lives but keep moving on, taking care of each other. As their mother's addiction rises and gets more out of hand, she is sent to rehab and the three sisters are sent to their long-lost father in Las Vegas. Little do they know he's a billionaire.

You're probably thinking:

and guess what? You're absolutely right!—in a way. These girls didn't even know that he basically existed. The story behind everything is so much darker than you can imagine. Dark in a girly-fun novel? YES.

From there, the plot begins to build up. They are brought to Vegas where they'll be living in one of their father's most-pricy hotels. They're in a penthouse and have their own bodyguards. They have their own bedrooms. The change from their past lives to the present is anything but ordinary. Each sister takes their steps in a whole different direction, and gossip is spreading and everyone is watching their steps. And this is just the beginning of a hell-of-a-ride crazy summer with flings, secrets, and mysteries.

This book is Without reading this, you won't be able to understand what it did to me. I read this in one sitting in a matter of hours. Michelle Madow is a writer who writes lush, defined, and pure stories that's chapters will suck you up into a time-machine and throw you into these girls's lives in a huge city with partying, drinking and clubbing. All of the positive stereotypes about the Hilton's lives are true, and by reading this you'll be able to relive a life of not one, not two, but three different heiresses.

Favourite sis from greatest to least? Courtney, Savannah, Peyton. I'm not saying I hate them. I freaking love all of the characters in this book. But really, I found myself relating to Courtney the most.

“Courtney wished her long-term plans were as solid's as Brett's. All she knew was that she wanted to do something with her love of books. There were tons of jobs in the book industry, and while she didn't know which one would be right for her, she was leaning toward editing.”

SCORE! As you can tell, SHE'S A BOOKWORM AND SMART AND INDEPENDENT. ;D She's an automatic lover of mine, hehe. And the whole mess-up with Brett? Oh, no. Honey, you just have to go out and keep loving him, even though your separated for such a crazy reason. She deserves Brett.

Brett's my favourite guy. Not much to rave about since all of him is in my heart, but you can probably tell that I'm in love with him. But, Courtney can have him. :)

This book was amazing. Period.

Michelle Madow captivated me from beginning to end and left me obsessed—literally. After reading, I was so thankful to have an ARC of the sequel so I can get straight into it. Her writing is like biting into a gooey-piece of your favourite food. (If it's meant to be gooey and sweet and all.) There's so many ways I can express what this book did to me, but all I can say for now is—magic and illusion. This book's amazingness made it feel like I was reading an illusion. It's so amazing that it's so believable. No negativity in my world, and I sure hope that you all will see that as well!

There were some issues with the writing and flow of the book. There were too many pov's going on and it sometime felt like too much. But overall it was a fun and addictive read and I'd be interested in reading the sequel :)

I have been looking for a book like this for ages now! Does this mean I liked it? It certainly does! I am a huge fan of Gossip Girl and have been super sad since the TV show ended, so discovering Michelle Madow's The Secret Diamond Sisters is like a gift from heaven to me. But I have to warn you, if you did not like Gossip Girl and all the drama, glamour, parties and everything else it features, there is a high chance you may not like this book. But, if you did like it, you will absolutely love this book. Just imagine, we maybe get a chance to relive the love story of Chuck Bass and Blair Waldorf all over again! Of course, not them exactly but the characters in this book who are similar to them.

Now back to The Secret Diamond Sisters. After their mum ends up in the rehab, Savannah, Courtney and Peyton have to move to Las Vegas and live with their father whom they never met before. You can imagine how surprised they were when they found out that he is Adrian Diamond, one of the richest men and owner of the Diamond Hotel on the Strip in Las Vegas. You will have to read the book to see how the sisters react to it and how do they fit in.

The story is told from 4 POV's actually, the three sisters and Madison, a Las Vegas socialite and Queen B, which came as a surprise to me. I still don't quite understand why she got her own POV, but she did make the story much more interesting so I don't question it much. Savannah was a sweet, naive fifteen-year-old girl, and while sometimes I wondered why she did some things, then I remembered that she is only 15, and all she wanted was to fit in. Courtney was the responsible one, the one who always had everything under control and took care of everything, so I really liked when she ended up having fun in Vegas and doing things she would never do normally. Peyton, I didn't like very much. She was the rude one, the one who is against everything and doesn't accept what life gives her. Madison and the guys, Brett, Oliver, and Damian are also very important characters in the book, and I'm excited to see how it all continues.

The romance in this book is crazy. If you are thinking that you will get a great love story in this book, you are highly mistaken, because that is not the case. The romance is superficial, and it doesn't go into depth. It focuses more on the physical attraction, but I can see room for some more development in the next books. It is hard to say who is coupled with whom because even if it was just one book, I'd need a lot of time to explain it all to you and it may contain a lot of spoilers.

The biggest reason why I gave this book 4 stars is because of the ending. I felt like the book just abruptly ended and I was thinking that I am missing some pages in my eARC. It's like it ended half way through and you don't even get the feeling it ended. But nevertheless, The Secret Diamond Sisters was a real surprise to me. I loved reading this fast paced chic-lit and can't wait to see what Michelle Madow has in store for us in her next book!

This book has no plot.

So if you actually care about those things then you're not going to like this book.

The characters are horrible too.

Then you might be wondering why read this book at all.

The answer: Las Vegas

Madow does a fantastic job describing the city. You really did get a feeling of the city for this book. From its themed hotels, wild parties, and over the top atmosphere I really did feel like I got to know Vegas in this book. Grant it, I did have a little problem with how effortlessly these teenagers were able to sneak into bars and casinos with little to no explanation, but for the most part I'll give this a pass just because the descriptions of these places were what kept me interested in what otherwise would've been a very boring book with as I said before pretty much god awful characters.

This book in a lot of ways reminds me of Melissa de la Cruz's Blue Bloods series, which should be a good thing. Because I sort of loved that series (at least its earlier books). However, instead of spinning some of those rich kid cliches like de la Cruz did, Madow's book is overwhelmed by them.

I guess there's no other thing to do than to discuss the characters:

Savannah: I didn't mind her that much. Actually, I was sort of relieved to read her point of view after Peyton and Madison's. She was still pretty annoying though. Savannah is your typical idiotic I want to be popular YA protagonist. And I really wonder just how many of these do publishers want us to read about. I guess when you're the targeted age group, this might be something you have to deal with. But I remember reading this stuff when I was in the targeted age group and found it annoying. I honestly don't like reading about a poser who spends thirty grand on getting beautiful and a whole new wardrobe. But I have to admit, after reading both Peyton and Madison's POV, I did find her refreshing. And that is sad to say. Especially since she sort of failed at being popular and as a character in general.

Courtney: Probably the best out of the bunch, but a bit of a cliche. Have you even noticed how "good" YA characters are always modeled after Belle from Beauty and the Beast-meaning, they love to read, are beautiful and don't really try/work at it, and of course are Ivy bound. Maybe Belle wasn't Ivy bound, but you get the picture. Even though I get bored with this stereotype, I actually did prefer Courtney to any other character in this book. And yes, I get teens can be all about me, but let's face it, we don't want to read about an all about me protagonist.

Peyton: God, this was probably the worst character. I got annoyed with Savannah and Madison, but at least they had their moments. Peyton though... When Madow does the whole tough girl character she does it complete with pleather sports bras for tops. Yeah, that's Peyton in a nutshell plus a major daddy complex. I really couldn't feel sorry for her either. She makes stupid decisions that have very little thought in them. And yeah, I think Madow is trying to get her to reform at the end but it's going to take a lot more for me to like her.

Book review and Author Interview is also posted on my blog: <https://bibliopearl.wordpress.com/201...>

(A paperback copy was provided by the author Michelle Madow in exchange for an honest review. This does not influence my rating and review)

My level of enjoyment with this book can be summed up into 5-diamond studded stars. Why? Because this book is highly entertaining. It goes beyond expectations.

The Secret Diamond Sisters is the first book of The Secret Diamond Sisters series. This book talks about three teenage siblings namely Peyton, Courtney, and Savannah who grew up with their single-mom who is an alcoholic. Financially average, the sisters' lives dramatically changed when they discovered that they are in fact, the daughters of the billionaire Adrian Diamond whom they haven't met since the day they were born. When their mom was admitted to an alcoholic rehab center for treatment and self-help, the three of them were forced to leave their small town in California and move to the lustrous sin-city Las Vegas. From there, they basically experienced luxury at its finest, but at the same time, met friends who were either real or fake, and lived with their dad who's a complete stranger, which made them wonder if being the daughters of a rich man really is a perk or a disaster.

Now here are the reasons why I admire this book to bits.

LAS VEGAS. I haven't been to the US, let alone Las Vegas. And this book made me feel as though I was there, enjoying some Piña colada with the hottest, rich guy in the city while doing some serious shopping and watching the Phantom of the Opera in a grand theater, getting my Blamex wasted like the sky's not even the limit. WHY NOT?

THE CHARACTERS. Basically, the main characters here in this book are not perfect. The three siblings are simply the kind of teenage girls you basically meet every day. A bit angsty, immature, and sometimes even frustrating. Their good side, however, is that they can be your best friends, too. Their sisterly love is utterly admirable, and those qualities, I guess, are one of the reasons why I adore this book. I learned to be patient with each of their flaws.

Each of them has different traits. One is a socially-obsessed girl who desperately wants to fit in the new society, while the other one is a modest type who settles to just stay in her room reading books, while the other is a rebel-type who does not bend to any other people's commands. The three of them are different and their characters are the one that makes the book more interesting.

WRITING STYLE OF THE AUTHOR. I've always been a sucker for books that are written in an easy, simple style. This book gave me the real pleasure because Michelle Madow's writing is light, it doesn't give me troubles.

MULTIPLE POVS. I kind of hate multiple POVS, but this one was well-done. There are four POVS in this book-- Savannah, Peyton, Courtney, and a secondary character (antagonist) Madison. Alright, before you react, I want to assure you that four POVS will never confuse you. The author did a great job in voicing those characters. I love how the tone made them really different with one another. That's quite impressive.

FAMILY DRAMA AND ROMANCE. I love the family drama here and how the sisters tried to reach out with their dad. The romance is also absolutely good and swoony. And did I tell you it's unpredictable, too? YES. I basically didn't have any idea who the siblings' love interests are, which makes the story intriguing.

As a whole, I did have fun with this book. It's my kind of book. It's girly, classy, and unique for my taste. It's a book you guys should definitely check! If you are a fan of Gossip Girl, then I have this feeling you're going to like it, too. :)
