Errin says

I liked this one more than the first! It actually made me laugh a few times. As in Part One, I appreciate how mature the themes are, from conflict between tradition and modernization, to the nods at industrialization.

4.5 stars.

This installment was fab. Not only do you get to be with the Gaang again, there's a cameo from a very dear and special character, baaackstory, Sokka being priceless, and a stupid cliffhanger to boot. Not a whole lot more you could ask for, to be honest.

Manisha says

This felt like a typical ATLA episode, to be honest. And I laughed out loud in certain instances, which proved it.

Sokka was, as always, the brains and the funny guy. Katara was the Waterebending Master we all know and love. Aang was finally able to connect with one of his past selves through the Spirit World, as well as learn why the tradition was important. Toph meets her father for the first time since she left home with the Avatar... and things don't go well. And finally, they might all die. Like I said, typical ATLA episode.

I really miss this show.

Xiomy's Book Tales says

Okay I actually enjoyed this one a lot more than I did the first part!

It does have me wondering a few things it mentions that the Southern Water Tribe 'hasn't been doing all that well' but at the end of Book 1 Master Pakku and other benders were going to fix the broken bonds between both tribes. We also know that Master Pakku went because of what happened when we see the White Lotus. So this has me confused as to what happened in the Southern Water tribe and am also intrigued with the next story line.

Also Lao was just such a mean father I mean Toph has separated from them but she has accomplished so much! Am intrigued to see how this wraps up!

Charlotte Anne Hamilton says

[[4.5 STARS]]

Holy hell, I loved how tense things got in this and that Toph was the main focus! I love her so much!

Flor Méndez says

Mejor que el primero de la trilogía sin duda, pero igual sigue sin ser una historia que me encantttttte. Me gustaron más las otras dos trilogías.

The Rift: Part Two is yet another fantastic Avatar: The Last Airbender graphic novel! The artwork by Gurihiru continues to be my favourite feature!

“No! This isn't possible!”

“What you haven't heard? I invented metalbending.”

“You guys have got to stop worshipping the past and start worrying about right now! Otherwise you're not gonna have a right now to worry about!”

— Toph Beifong, the greatest earthbender of all time

“If you separate yourself from those who came before, you will inevitably repeat our mistakes.”

“I am the Avatar. I stand on the border between the spirit and human worlds, to ensure that border never grows into a rift. Peace is possible. Balance is possible.”

Note: this review is to span all three vols. of 'The Rift'

I picked this up because I'm a huge ATLA fan! I love the TV show so much. I wasn't sure what to expect when I began to read 'The Rift' but I was pleasantly surprised. The art was great, I got lots of feels from the story, and I think the plot overall was great.

I LOVED that we see the Air Acolytes (the beginning of them) from LOK! I was also pleased with the way Aang reacted to them, it was very human and natural. Satoru was a nice add in this comic (I'm going to guess that he will probably be Toph's baby daddy), it was great to see a softer side of Toph as there was only a few of those moments in the show. Lao and Toph's rekindle was sweet and I wonder if she will rekindle with her mother..

An interesting theme that flows throughout all of the comics I've read so far is the struggle between the old and new world; I thought it was perfectly done in here. Aang, especially, was prevail in that theme; He's the bridge between the spirit and human world, he was raised in the distant past but now lives in the present. He's always being torn in two places but because of his knowledge of both sides we always see him overcome his obstacles.

The back ground story on why and how the festival started was great! (Once again I would love a book or something of Spirit World stories.) It was neat that we got to see a lot of Avatar Yangchen as I don't recall seeing or hearing barely anything about her in the TV show. I was tearing up when Avatar Roku and Aang rekindled, I believe the relationship between the past selves and the present is so special (view spoiler)

What I didn't like was the random angry water tribe girls, I felt like they were there for extra drama, the only good thing they gave us was a look into the current state of the Northern Water Tribe.

Kelsey says

Highly enjoyable chapter. I deeply appreciate the way that this series has been wrapping up loose ends from the show while expanding the mythology.

This volume increased the conflicts and risks to the characters, though little was resolved. I feel like the final volume will probably get the 5-star rating, the usual curse of the second entry in a trilogy.

Hopefully, developments here will be seen in Legend of Korra.

[WOOOOH I'M DONE!

Part one: OH SHIT TOPH'S DAD SHOWED UP. Though I can't really say I feel very bad for her; I can't wait for her to grow up and stop being so disrespectful and flippant to what's important to the people she calls her friends. Speaking with Aang about the fact that the refinery is the future he's working towards could have gone much more gently and respectfully. It is VERY rude to disrespect another's culture and traditions. T
