Making Documentary Films and Reality Videos: A Practical Guide to Planning, Filming, and Editing Documentaries of Real Events Barry Hampe

Making Documentary Films and Reality Videos is the perfect text for students of filmmaking who would like to make a documentary. Barry Hampe, who has made more than 150 documentary films and videos, traces the two main approaches to documentary--recording behavior and re-creating past events—and shows students how to do both effectively. Covering all the steps, from conceptualization to completion, the book includes chapters on visual evidence; documentary ethics; why reality is not enough; budgeting; and casting, crew, and equipment selection.

Useful...

Jeff says

Every time I pick up this book I learn about how to make a documentary film. I have never made a documentary film but I would like to in the future. The way this book is written makes it easy to read. It is clear and informative without being clunky or distracting. Hampe has great things to say.

Michael says

Not really much here!

Brenda Gregor says

Phew! Thank goodness I picked this up before too much footage was shot.

I love the idea of making documentary films so these books are always interesting to me.

Robin says

This book provides a great overview of everything that goes into making a documentary film - if you happen to go back to the 90's.

That's not meant as a knock to this book, it's just plain fact. The portions of this book that discuss methods and choices that go into filming offer up fantastic coverage and suggestions. When it comes to deciding between film and video as your format, the book clearly shows its age.

Of course, I picked this edition up a week or two before I found an announcement of the updated edition, which will definitely rectify the dated information, pushing that edition to a 4 if not a 5 star selection.

Zeddd says

It was good, but repetitive. I didn't read ALL the chapters, but most of it.
