Mother Rabbit's Son Tom Dick Gackenbach

Contains two short stories - "Hamburgers, Hamburgers" and "Tom's Pet".

In "Hamburgers, Hamburgers" Tom turns his little furry nose up at Mother's suggestion that spring is the time to eat dandelions. He wants a hamburger "with onions and ketchup and pickles on a poppy-seed roll." Mother Rabbit wishes she had a nickel for every pickle Tom eats, and says his head is full of ketchup.

In "Tom's Pet" our friend Tom tries to bring home several different pets, only to be told by Mother that he cannot keep them.

Vonda says

Loved this book as a kid. Thrilled to be reading it with my son now!

Melissa says

It's cute

I loved the story "Hamburgers, Hamburgers" when I was a kid. So happy someone pointed out the title of the full book the short came from.

Margaret says

This was one of my oldest son's favorites when he was young. I found a copy recently and had to read it again. Cute!

Jen Chandler says

I absolutely loved this book as a child. My favorite part of it being the first short story, "Hamburgers, Hamburgers." But I can recall seeing that bland dark brown on brown tattered and torn cover and I would get so excited. I will have to hunt down a copy for my own child.

Cherylynn says

I read this book as a young child and I loved it so much that I remembered the story, maybe this is why I love cheeseburgers? A wonderful book!

Cheryl says

Read a well-loved copy from my local library. I found it rather simple, but I can see children being amused by the little twist endings.
