The yellow belly of a toothy green crocodile. An orange reed boat on the blue Nile. The gold in Nefertiti's headdress. These are just a few of the sweetly simple designs in this board book that will help little ones learn their colors while dipping a toe into the history and culture of ancient Egypt.

I won this book from Good Reads.

A board book for youngsters who are learning their colors, the book is very colorful. It also introduces them to the wonders of Ancient Egypt as an early age.

I've loved Egypt all my life, since I read about the moving of Abu Simbu Temples by UNESCO. I wish I could have had this book!

I received this book in a free giveaway from Goodreads.

For a children's book it was simply illustrated. I liked how the book was made of thick cardboard and easy to turn with little baby fingers. Plus the pictures and borders of the pages helped to show the "colors" of Egypt. It would be an excellent book for young babies learning about their colors.
