The literal translation of this book in English is: "Chased away, Unneeded" and it is by a very succesful, famous writer and poet from Bulgaria. It is about Bulgarian revolutanaries seeking protection in Romania (which is on the border of Bulgaria) while in their own country war rages on and their families are brutally killed and tortured. In this foreign country they are unable to speak their native languages and to believe in their own ideas. Instead they struggle to find work and sell their poetry to buy themselves time and hope for the future. It is trully unbelievable and yet it makes you proud to be a part of that culture.

I'll read it again, just to make sure, but I think that's my favorite book by this author. And Vazov, I don't like him that much as a writer.

Another bulgarian book. I can't really translate its title, sorry about that. The author is again Ivan Vazov and the book has to do with slavery. This time the characters are outside the slaved Bulgaria - they are in Romania. Some of the character' name are - Bruchkov, Strandjata, Makedonski, Popcheto. Bruchkov is a young enthusiastic patriot who runs away from Bulgaria and his wealthy family to experience adventure in Romania - with the outcasts. They all are living in Strandjata - the oldest one's pub. They may live poorly but one thing is important - the idea of saving their mother country from the slavery. They are doing major plans there in Romania - what and when to do to help Bulgaria. Later on they finally attend a big fight, unluckily a bad fortune happens to our characters...

I swear I cried in the end of that book. This review was for all my english-speaking friends here :) Hope you liked it :) If you have any questions - ask me

That's an amazing book. I thought it would be boring like (don't know how to translate it) "Pod igoto" but one big NO. I highly recommend it. Add to " want to read" shelf. It's worth it. I even cried at the end.
