Heart: Do you want to do something fun?

Brain: We have to give a decent review right now.

Heart: Just give the stars and let's watch a movie!

Brain: It shouldn't be hasty. The graphics and lines used should be analyzed.

I can't remember when I started following The Awkward Yeti. It had to be at least a year ago or more that I saw someone share one of his Heart and Brain comics on Facebook and I was hooked.

What I love about these comics is that they're so simple – such a simple concept of a heart and a brain – but they're brought to life so well. They're always funny, but so many of them are philosophical as well, and really make you reevaluate what the hell you're doing in life.

Heart and Brain belong to The Awkward Yeti, who I'm assuming is the stand-in for the artist, Nick Seluk. Brain is the logical one, always trying to work hard and do the right thing – trying to save and not make rash decisions – generally living the safe and complacent life. But Heart is the polar opposite. Heart always wants to have fun and shirk responsibility and chase a good time. Heart is all about living, not just existing.

As you read through the comics you imagine these internal battles happening between your own brain and heart, and depending on which way you lean, feel that you could probably be a little more of the other thing. It's always a struggle in finding that right balance, if such a thing exists.

Life, am I right?

This one is probably one of my favorites:

And this one, just for fun:

Also, this review is the best!

Great book! It reminded me to let my heart decide over some decisions, but to make sure they're not really against my brain. I thought that Heart was adorable - he reminded me a awful lot of Olaf, which I love - and made me want to be more passionate and adventurous, because Brain can be stupid, sometimes, even if it's his job to make sure we don't make fools of ourselves. I do think there could have been more humor in this book, because I didn't really laugh, but I still enjoyed reading it.

(Thank you NetGalley for providing me with a digital copy of this book in exchange for an honest review.)

You guys, I have found a treasure. heart eyes

One of the most unique graphic novels I have ever read. The idea of illustrating the daily life moments of a heart and a brain – Heart and Brain! - is so smart, original, and yet, you can't stop thinking, "How has no one thought about this before?"

It just feels right. Because, after all, we all have a brain and a heart. We are able to connect to these small organs. It's possible there aren't many yetis among us, but that's alright, because Heart and Brain run the show of the higher being anyway.

If you're wondering, I connected better to brain, but I loved, loved Heart. What a sweet thing. Nothing worries Heart. It goes about its day, being the passionate organ that it is, while Brain follows right behind, making sure Heart doesn't fall into a huge black hole while trying to capture its best friend – the orange butterfly!

But Brain and I, we're one in the same. I worry constantly, like it does. I make a hundred plans before acting, like it does. I try to solve problems, like it does. Sometimes I wish I were more like Heart: laughing instead of worrying and acting instead of planning all the time.

Brain is an adult and Heart is a kid.

Great universal truths expressed through humor and charming illustrations.

I enjoyed reading these comic strips. They were so cute and I loved Heart so much! This is a great example of something simple that can be brilliant and hilarious. Everyone will enjoy this because everyone can relate to the struggle of brain vs heart. I would recommend this to everyone and I would definitely read more Awkward Yeti comic strips! I received a copy from the publisher in exchange for an honest review.

This is the most accurate description of how I feel that I have read in what feels like forever and I am not sure yet how I feel about that. Easily a favourite that I will be revisiting and exploring the world of more in the future.

My heart says, “Let’s get a new book.”
My brain says, “No, we have a way too many to read yet.”

My heart says, “Let’s go have some fun.”

My brain says, “No, we have to study now.”

My heart says, “Let’s go on a trip.”

My brain says, “We should keep money for the future.”

My heart says, “Look, a huge dish of chocolate with churros!”

My brain says, “We’ll get so fat we’ll have to roll from then on.”

My heart says, “Let’s dance in the middle of the room.”

My brain says, “No, we don’t want to make a fool of ourselves here.”

My heart says, “I want to sleep a little more.”

My brain says, “We need to get up right now.”

My heart says, “I only want to do funny things, you are a spoilsport.”

My brain says, “But we have responsibilities, too.”

My heart says, “Let’s go on a trip and marry a Hollywood guy, they make me beat faster!”

My brain says, “But are you so sure they will be good people and have a brain, too?”

My heart says, “Let’s talk to that person and make him laugh!”

My brain says, “He’ll give you a weird glance if you do, our jokes don’t make sense to them. Remember, we are weirdos. We don’t fit here.”

My heart says, “Everybody is a good person, I want to love everybody.”

My brain says, “We learnt the hard way that’s not true, and then you get hurt for your naïveté and cry to me and tell me you’ll listen next time. But you never do.”

The story of my life.

Bullet Review:

I REALLY enjoyed this one. It was HILARIOUS and serious and moving all at once.

I am so Brain...

Peter Derk says

I don't know what to do with this review, so I'll do the mature thing, play that Marry/Fuck/Kill game. Brain, heart, and I guess Stomach because he shows up a few times.

Brain and heart are tough. On the one hand, heart is the clear choice for Fuck, but then you've got to spend an entire lifetime married to brain or stomach. But if you fuck Brain, then you can marry heart and have a lifetime of whimsy, which is probably like being married to Natalie Portman from Garden State and really annoying. How did Natalie Portman get that role? Was Zooey Deschanel busy that day? Growing a field of dandelions intentionally and constructing a giant fan to blow the seeds off them? Making her own flavors of gum? Other whimsical shit?

Although, wait a second, Natalie Portman was ALSO in Mr. Magorium's Wonder Emporium, reprising almost the same role. I could have sworn that was Zooey. What the fuck is Natalie Portman doing? She's does The Professional, then a Star War, then Garden State, then another Star War, then Mr. Magorium, then Black Swan. What the fuck, Portman? I guess any Portman in a storm, eh?

I can't marry heart. Can I marry brain?

I'm pretty sure that in a real-life sense, I'm ALREADY married to brain. I wake up at night and have to actively tell myself to stop thinking about stuff before I can fall back asleep. Not like Einstein equations and shit, not smart stuff. Just thinking about nonsense like which volumes of The Walking Dead I own or something. I heard that you should keep a notebook by the bed and write that stuff down and then you can let go and sleep, but none of the stuff I think about is worth writing down. I don't want to have a notebook on the nightstand that says, "Krang > Shredder b/c has his own dimension!"

I can't marry heart, and I can't marry brain, so it looks like wedding bells for me and stomach. Which is fine. I ate three lunches today, and they were the three best parts of the day.

They say The One is whoever makes you into the best version of you, and food makes me into the best version of me, or at least the version that's not AS testy and dickish, so Stomach, let's get hitched.

I guess then the fucking goes with Heart. When you get down to Heart and Brain in that one, easy choice.

And that means I have to kill Brain. Which is too bad, but them's the breaks.

I'll probably kill Brain, THEN fuck Heart in hopes that my spirits will be raised by the fucking, and then I'll be ready to settle in to a nice life with stomach. And probably ready for tacos as well.

Brain vs Heart. The struggle is so real. This was so much fun but with undeniable truths. I really enjoyed it.
