Aurora Turnleaf is just another farmer's daughter when she stumbles upon a magnificent city built entirely of see-through crystal. It appears out of nowhere, in a part of the forest she's never ventured into before. Her guide is Iragos, a light mage, who introduces her to Kayne, the squire – or mage in training – for a dark wizard name Kronos. Unbeknownst to Aurora, Kayne has just stolen the Ythra Orb from the Hallowed Hall on behalf of his master and hidden it in her pack. Suddenly Aurora is thrust into a life or death quest to help Kayne find the mystical land of Morgis, where the Oracles who created the Orb can secure its safety. The path to Morgis itself will be treacherous enough, but those who seek to follow them will make it all the more life threatening. For on their path is the deadly Kronos, who has crafted a fierce legion of vicious minions to intercept Kayne and Aurora at every turn. Meanwhile Aurora and Kayne must battle both the elements and Kronos' dark magic to complete their quest. Along the way, the two teens from very different worlds must learn to work together to overcome obstacles, one of them being their mutual attraction. At last there is a final showdown between Kronos and Iragos, but who triumphs? Will it be the powerful mages or Aurora and Kayne using their "Entwined Courage" to try to keep the Orb in the light?

From Reader Review Entwined Courage for online ebook

Trevor Lund says

You can tell this was written by a first time writer. I'm sure she'll improve over time.

Entwined Courage was unique and creative enough to keep me entertained through the story, although I seem to be finding myself favoring YA/NA less and less lately I actually enjoyed reading this one. It needed some fleshing out but I thought it was done well enough that it didn't deter me from finishing it.

This is a great, but accessible, fantasy adventure book with two memorable YA characters you're not likely to forget anytime soon. It has all the major elements of fantasy/adventure but isn't 800 pages so you can enjoy the fantastic journey in just a few sittings!

Magic – yes, this story by Tracy Lane is not only filled with magical people living on a planet controlled by a council of light and dark mages but the story itself is magical and left me wanting more. The book is geared to young adults BUT will be enjoyed by those more mature as well. There is a hidden invisible city, a quest to reach an oracle, a budding romance, wizard fights and so much more. The author's ability with words created people and places I could easily visualize and managed to involve me and all of my senses as I read. The quality of writing was excellent and so was the story of Aurora, Kayne, Iragos and Kronos. I look forward to reading more books by Tracy Lane in the future.

This is a wonderful story of two enchanted teens who find more than just normal attraction between them. It's a clever and exciting retelling of the triumph of good over evil, of love over darkness. Ms. Lane has created a magical and beautiful world, which is easy to feel at home in. I recommend this for fantasy lovers as well as anyone who enjoys a good story. I can't wait for the sequel!

I was given this book in exchange for an honest review.

I found this to be a great first novel to a series. It is definitely geared toward YA readers. The author did a great job with character development and the storyline was amazing. I cannot wait for the next book in the series. Can't wait for more from this author! Hope I don't have to wait too long for the next in the series.

A fantastic book, well worth taking the time to read it!!! It's also one of a few books I'll be reading again

Catherine Vickers says

The best thing I liked about this story was that the powerful mages were not "all" powerful. Their powers were limited to a realistic setting.

The two main characters set the book for a young adult read.

I enjoyed the adventurous plot and the unusual fantasy creatures. There were a few characters that seemed to be playing no part at all, and I think the story could have evolved quite easily without them.

All in all an enjoyable light read, if you like fantasy adventure.

For centuries two worlds have existed in peace and harmony, the world of magic, a crystal city that floats high above the planet. Down below, on the planet, the common folk, who have no idea that the crystal city really exists believing it to be a myth. In the crystal city there are two forms of magic, the light and the dark, and they have stuck an easy balance and rule together for the good of both worlds. Tracy Lane brings us into this world and introduces us to a young squire who is duty-bound to obey his master no matter what he asks of him. The problem is that his master is a greedy power hungry dark mage who wants all the power for himself and cares for no one else. He orders his squire, Kayne to steal a powerful artifact which he must do, but he cannot fully comply with his master and breaks his duty by hiding the artifact instead of giving it to the master. Entwined Courage is the ensuing story of Kayne's struggle to right the wrong he did by obeying his master and protect a young girl, Aurora who he involved in this plot without thinking.

Tracy Lane does a wonderful job of describing the characters so vividly that you can imagine the evil in the eyes of Kronos and the compassion in the eyes of Iragos, As Entwined Courage continues the friendship between Kayne and Aurora grows, and much to Aurora's dismay she finds that she has magic in her. When she and Kayne work together to get away from Kronos, even with Aurora never having any training, they can do some amazing magic. Along with the story of righting his masters wrong, there is another story. This one is the one that involves Aurora's misguided belief in what the mages really do. She is sure they only protect the resources of the planet. She never thinks to consider that the common folk are the biggest resource they protect. As they work to right the wrong, Aurora must also grow up and figure out what she really believes about the mages and where her place in the two worlds really is.

Two mages Light Magic Iragos and Dark Magic Kronos don't like each other very much. Kronos wants to control all magic including his squire Kayne. Aurora can do things that no one else can and hides this ability from everyone. Aurora is shocked to see Crystalline city. She meets Iragos and Kayne while trying to figure out what is going on. Kronos forces Kayne to do something against his will but won't take no for an answer. Aurora and Kayne seem to have magical connection that continues to grow. What does Kronos plan? What does Aurora and Kayne magical connection mean? Can Iragos stop Kronos? Your answers await you Entwined Courage.

This high fantasy book has all the great elements in it: Good vs Evil, Unsuspecting people, and most of all Magic. Relatable characters and fast paced action combined with good storytelling. I loved how magical world is separate from the mundane creating not just one world but two worlds! I look forward to more books from this author.
