This collection offers twenty-one stories from the literature of America, a nation which has always been particularly at home in this form, and which has produced many of its masters.

Some of the stories included — those by Poe, James and Hemingway for example — are already widely known. Some will be less familiar to the English reader. Taken as a whole, The Penguin Book of American Short Stories is an excellent and entertaining introduction to the rich diversity of pleasures that the American short story at its best can offer.

Blanca says

As with compilations often, specially with the ones that do not focus on a theme, I think having so many types of stories leaves you with the sensation that it is an irregular book in terms of how much you like it.

Some of the stories I loved ("Children on their birthdays", "The Man that Corrupted Hadleyburg", "The Real Thing", "Bartleby" or "Neighbor Rosicky"), some were merely ok, and a couple bored me to tears ("Delta Autumn", "I'm looking at you").

Gutemann says

Mixed bag with some goodies in it.

Here are the good ones:

"Children on their Birthdays" by Truman Capote

"To build a fire" by Jack London

"The man who corrupted Hadleyburg" by Mark Twain

"Bartleby" by Herman Melville

Mihaelas says

The Legend Of Sleepy Hollow by Washington Irving 2.5 stars

Young Goodman Brown by Nathaniel Hawthorne 3 stars

Angela says

I did not read all of the stories but most of the ones that I did, I loved; such as Henry James, F. Scott Fitzgerald, William Faulkner, Ernest Hemingway and John Updike. Possibly this is not a fair rating because I didn't read the whole book but that's another reason I enjoyed it because of the flexibility to be selective.

Unicat says

To be honest, I only bought this book for Washington Irving's Sleepy Hollow, and that is the only short story I read in it. I do not know if I will read the other stories or not.

I quite liked the Sleep Hollow story, even though it felt a bit long at times. I really liked the plot, but not the author's prose that much. But that is only my point of view.
