Shannon Rickert says

Another great board book. I had a little boy ask me to read these and see if I liked them (he Loved them)!!! I did and I thanked him for recommending such great books for me.

Erik says

Fun early learning book with some classic 1970's style DC art.

Carol says

The illustrations are fabulous and colorful. The concepts however are a little forced and abstract for really young children to understand.

Kristina says

It's a super hero book. What boy won't like this book. My twins wouldn't put it down.

jacky says

Colors were good, and I think the book should have focused just there. The shapes were okay, but didn't fit with the colors and could have been a separate book. The action words were lame. The women in the book at least strong, but there were not enough of them.

ThatLeo says

Orange book. RED! BLUE! GREEN! YELLOW! ORANGE! BROWN! PURPLE! PURPLE! PURPLE!
CIRCLE! Thaaaaat.

Beckett says

What a fun intro to the DC Comics Universe. It includes colors (all of the primary and secondary, plus black, white and brown) in addition to shapes and actions.

I'm looking forward to exploring other books in the series.

Jon(athan) Nakapalau says

Thank you DC superheroes! Now I know my shapes!

Amie says

There's almost TOO much information on every page. It's a cute book, though.

Jen says

This boardbook teaches colors and shapes and other ideas with pictures of superheroes. superfun.

Samantha says

Basic concepts such as colors, shapes, and actions are reviewed using both male and female superheroes. I appreciated that some lesser known superheroes were included alongside Batman etc. The layouts were pretty good, not too cluttered and the hero was often shown performing an action which I think will especially appeal to boys.

Overall, a fun new spin on concepts.

Emelda says

Ugh. There are only 3 women in this book, and everyone is white. I would have impulsively bought this if it wasn't for that.

Mei-Ling says

that belt buckle looks like a square, not a rectangle, but overall a fun little book for kids and adults alike
