Don't miss this series from Mitsuba Takanashi, the popular manga creator who brought you Crimson Hero. Teenaged Kayano continues to search for solace in her complex relationship with Takeru, the badboy son of her mother's fiance, the school principal. Hoping to finally spend some quality time together, Takeru and Kayano plan a picnic. But, as they are getting ready, the clouds roll in--and it seems the dark forecast isn't restricted to the weather. At the start of the new semester, Kayano's first love, Shinnosuke, is the basketball coach and Takeru's prospective fiancee is the team manager. Can things ever be the same?

It's been a long time since I last read this series, but I'm going to try and pick up where I left off. Understandably, I'm a bit lost. I remember that Kayano and Takeru are secretly "dating," and it has to be a secret because their parents are getting married. What I don't really remember, though, is anything about the supporting characters.

The main frustration in this volume lies with the appearance of apparent "rivals" for each one's affections. Clearly, Takeru has no interest in Rumi, the girl his dad wants him to marry, and Kayano has no interest in Shin, the man she once had an idol-like crush on. But neither is secure enough in the other's feelings to not feel threatened. Thus, they keep going in mostly-silent agony, with a secret hug or kiss every once in a while. Not a very satisfying way to live. I hope they can tell people soon, for all of our sakes.

Blargh...I have mixed feelings about Rumi. On one hand, I hate her. No matter how unknowingly, she's coming between Takeru and Kayano. She's being way too persistant when it's obvious Takeru doesn't like her. The first time they met, he flat out rejected her, but thanks to a talk with Kayano, she ended up transferring schools and hopes to get Takeru to accept her. I just wanted her to go away and stop causing problems for Kayano. However, another part of me feels bad for her. Takeru has been pretty harsh towards her, though he had good reasons and didn't want to get her hopes up for their arranged marriage. I really really want to fully hate Rumi, but I can't because she seems like such a nice girl. Unlike, some manga's love rivals, Rumi isn't overtly bitchy and she doesn't act cruelly to anyone. Part of you can't blame Rumi for upsetting Kayano. Rumi is honestly oblivious that Takeru already has someone he likes. It's not her fault that no one's told her that Takeru has a girlfriend.

It will be interesting to see how things will unfold with this love square haha. I can sympathize with Rumi, but I still dislike Shin. I don't care if he's Kayano's dad's friend/student or whatever. I don't want something to happen between him and Kayano...

Is a great book to read

Confessing to the person you like is never easy, having the attention seeking Edogawa Tekeru know who you like is even worse. Kayano thought high school was going to be hard enough but take on running errands for Takeru and it is almost unbearable especially when their parents are getting married and they have to move in with one another.

I loved the storyline development and growth of the characters. This is a series that I was really excited about reading. The romance does not start at the beginning but it grows stronger because of everything the couple has to overcome and go through. Kayano is a lovable personality and even though most people do not like Takeru in the beginning, he grows on you too.

Note: This review was completed after reading volumes 1-11.
