Death Pays a Visit Elizabeth Spann Craig

When psychic (and hubcap retailer) Wanda Alewine pays a late-night visit to Myrtle Clover, she urges the octogenarian sleuth to head straight to Greener Pastures Retirement Home. But Wanda doesn't want Myrtle to consider the Home's dubious amenities--she wants Myrtle to prevent a murder seen in a vision.

Reluctant Myrtle investigates with sidekick Miles, who seems a lot more interested in Greener Pastures than she is. As the duo digs, they uncover more than just Sudoku and Scrabble—they discover a sinister undercurrent... with murder as its outcome.

I can't get enough of Myrtle Clover! I love her quirky antics and personality! You never know what she might say or do when she is out to solve a murder! Miles is the perfect sidekick for her. Red her son and the town's law enforcement officer becomes as exasperated with her as my son's do with me at times. I want to Myrtle Clover when I grow up!

Rosemary Jarrell says

Red has been trying to get his Mama, Myrtle, to check out Greener Pastures Retirement Home. After Wanda gives her a mysterious message, Myrtle and Miles investigate hoping to prevent a murder. Life is exactly greener in the retirement home.

Happy to see a sleuth who isn't a svelte twenty-something

Super Myrtle

Myrtle is at it again along with her trusty sidekick Miles. Although we find her leaning more on Wanda because Miles isn't really pulling his weight. And Red is down for the count much like Puddings lovelife, the gnomes are out and Greener Pastures doesn't know what hit them. A must read as usual. I really wish I could visit this world as regularly as Tomorrow 's Promise hooks all who watch it.

Loved this book. These books are brilliant. They're funny, interesting & keep you hooked right to the end. Definitely worth a read.

I read this book as a standalone book and didn't realize it was part of a series. I really love the main character Myrtle!! She has spunk and she is smart. I love the gnomes that she puts out when she's upset with her son Red who currently is out of commission with knee replacement surgery. She has a great side kick in her neighbor, Miles who goes along for the ride helping her investigate the mystery at Green Pastures retirement home. The story was engaging for me and held my interest throughout! I really enjoyed it!

Great book!

I've read all the Myrtle Clover books and they just keep getting better. Death Pays a Visit is fast paced (well as fast paced as a octogenarian can get). Myrtle is a hoot and the other characters blend quite well into the story. I was shocked when Myrtle actually spent the night at Greener Pastures! Anyone who has read this series knows how much Myrtle hates Greener Pastures. I highly recommend this book, especially if you like cozy mysteries. Elizabeth Spann Craig is a fantastic writer. She also writes under other names.

Death Pays a Visit

Myrtle's friend and psychic Wa.David delivers a cryptic message that sends Myrtle and Miles out to the retirement home of Greener Pastures. Under the pretext of visiting her friend Ruby, Myrtle starts investigating only to stumble onto a body. Deemed a natural death, Myrtle isn't convinced and has her son open an investigation and she sets out investigating on her own. When her investigation leads to her own life being threatened, will she put all the pieces together in time or will she end up a casualty herself? Delightful characters, humorous storyline, great plot & setting- I'll be looking for more Myrtle Clover Mysteries.

Another fun read

I enjoy reading the adventures of Myrtle (and her sidekick, Miles). Things start off at a casual pace until Myrtle gets on somebody's bad side (not always the "bad guy"), and then the fun begins. It missed five stars due to a bit of confusion - perhaps another round of proofreading would have cleared up a couple of missteps. Overall, I recommend this to anyone who enjoys a quick, and often funny, mystery.

Myrtle, Miles, and Wanda come through again. This time we get to see inside the Greener Pastures Retirement Home, and it is as uninviting as Myrtle has told Red all along. I love this series so much.

The change of locale was fun.

Sandra, Shenandoah patron, June 2015, 4 stars:

Death Pays a Visit is in the Myrtle Clover series written by Elizabeth Spann Craig. I have read the entire series through this one and have enjoyed each one. I love the antics of Myrtle, a lady of age who is discouraged from driving, walks with a cane and has a neighbor, Miles, who is her partner in crime solving and official wheels when she needs to get somewhere. This book is set in Greener Pastures Home for the Elderly, the very place that Myrtle's son Red has been trying to talk Myrtle into calling home in her later years. In the end Red sees that Greener Pastures may not be a great place to spend your last days as Myrtle figures out the secrets that lurk around every corner and the "who done it" in this facility for the elderly. Myrtle is Miss Marple with a kick.

Friend or Foe

I really enjoyed reading this story. I loved the way Myrtle and Miles shared exciting moments. I thought their bickering back and forth about Greener Pastures was funny. Sometimes you're fooled into knowing who your real friend is. I'm glad that the killer was finally caught. I look forward to reading more of your work.

Leanne Newton says

Great story. I love all the Myrtle Clover stories as an easy read. It was fun for a change getting to learn more about the retirement home and for another officer to be in charge.

Laura Cushing says

Number 7 in the Myrtle Clover series- I've read and loved them all. This installment has Myrtle's psychic friend Wanda dropping in with a cryptic message that there will soon be a murder at the Greener Pastures Retirement Home.

Feisty Myrtle has been trying to keep out of that home for years, in spite of her son Red wanting her to retire to there. But now she and her sidekick / best friend Miles must go investigate and blend in with the seniors there to find a killer.

Like the other Myrtle books, it was full of fun and laugh out loud moments. The mystery was well plotted and the end was a surprise.

Can't wait for more Myrtle Clover - one of my favorite cozy mystery series ever.
