Like a force of nature P. Lee Payne strode into Karen Hunter's office demanding to know why she was stalking him. Intrigued by his moody sensitivity, thrilled by his vulnerability, Karen was determined to interview the brilliant but mysterious photographer for her magazine. She probed deeply, uncovering emotions he'd concealed behind his camera. His unexpected humor, his whispered dreams, freed her own feelings. And his photographs revealed Karen to herself, opened her to his penetrating gaze-and to his need for her. Could the secrets their hearts confided protect their love, or would harsh daylight shatter their fragile alliance.
