The scene with Ryuu naked and the tattoo was touching

Haruka says

Unique and entirely on its own. One of the few real (yaoi) mangas/stories period I've ever come across. The way the relationships, and characters are depicted, developed, constructed and move in real time, is simply masterly made. The experience is truly as if merging into the characters' lives and emotions, just as real as diving into a deep blue ocean and feeling the depth, silence and immensity and release of time and space. She (Miyamoto Kano) truly touched the core that connects all great things, and is the one most valuable, and tied all strings of the anonymous readers, and connected, as one single face, body and mind, everything all adjoined. Just as experiencing life.
