Jill says

A great book for visual children.

Joshua's Mom says

Great beginner I spy book for toddlers.

Connie says

Very easy for younger kids - maybe a little too easy for older kids, this one doesn't get much use anymore. We've had to buy other books in the genre that were more advanced.

ABC says

I Spy for babies! Get them started young!

---

Haley Anderson says

A great way for word association to begin with younger children- seeing the word and finding the matching picture

Samantha says

A board book seek and find that works more to build vocabulary using familiar objects as opposed to presenting a real challenge as the picture books series does. Great for sharing with toddlers.

Libby says

i love books like this because they are very easy to make up games depending on the age of the reader.

Nicole says

Carmen is obsessed with the little plastic baby on one of the pages & sometimes just seeks it out! This book is sing-songy, it has a rhythm & great for tracking. It is a primary skill that will help with reading & being able to move their eyes from left to right on the page. They look at the picture on the left & have to find it again on the right.

Kaethe says

Not every toddler will go for these books, but for those who do, the parent will be so very grateful. They're like magic.

Cassandra says

My toddler is a visual learner and loves all of the I Spy books. She always has one or two checked out from the library. They have been great vocabulary builders for her because there are so many items in the pictures that I would not otherwise think to show her. I do not usually read the text to her. We enjoy talking about what she sees, or I will randomly choose things to tell her I spy, and she looks for them. Sometimes, we will look for the items listed in the text together.

Jennie says

James doesn't quite get this book, but he loves the pictures and there are so many different items for us to point out and teach him about. Bought this at a garage sale and am loving it.

Becky says

Perfect little "I Spy" book for toddlers! Logan had so much fun finding the different objects, and he was so pleased with himself when he did!
