Mail Order Merchant Kirsten Osbourne

When Toria Miller realized her only option to get away from her over-amorous employer was to escape from Beckham, Massachusetts, her first thought was to become a mail order bride. After talking to her niece, the matchmaker for the only agency in town, she chose a letter and embarked on a journey that would take her all the way to Creede, Colorado. When Toria arrived, she was excited to start her new life with her husband, the owner of the mercantile.

Mortimer Jackson was blessed with the perfect wife. Now that he's a widower, he's convinced he needs someone just like his first wife. He runs a mercantile in Creede, Colorado, and though his new bride doesn't look like he expected, he hopes she'll be just like his Grace. It doesn't take him long to realize his new bride is nothing like the first. How will he be able to accept anything less than the perfection he had the first time? Is their marriage doomed from the very beginning?

Tamera Westhoff says

Sweet Romance

I love how this book had more info about the previous characters and I especially love that the angel was for both of them, for a great reason! I wish I had her energy!

Kay says

Enjoyed this book though the series has been inconsistent in my opinion.

Sharon says

Hero: Mortimer --- Heroine: Toria

Reading Enjoyment:4.5* I enjoyed reading this engaging love story that is well written with loveable characters, and was an exciting/ tantalizing story There is an element of faith, and angels which seems to be key to this series. As this is book 5 another new angel was introduced, I like that it's not all the same angles in each story.

Reviewed at Historically Romantic

Throughout the earliest stories in the Cowboys and Angels series we've heard the local mercantile, Mortimer, speak of ordering himself a mail order bride from back East... one day. It came as no surprise to readers, like me, who have followed the Brides of Beckham series as well as to who he was referring to. Well, Mortimer went and sent off his letter, and although it seems that he's looking for a good marriage what isn't in that letter is that he's looking for a wife just like Grace who died about five years ago. Maybe he didn't even realize it himself, but he certainly was imagining how this unknown woman would do things and look like his first wife. Mortimer is in for a surprise for he's about to get not the wife he wanted but the wife that he truly needs thanks to Elizabeth's matchmaking skills and a little help from an angel.

Toria headed to Creede, Colorado with high hopes and and even higher nerves. She trusted her niece Elizabeth's matchmaking talents, but this was a huge step far from home. She didn't expect to love her husband on first sight but she certainly didn't expect to feel that her very existence disappointed her groom either. It's going to take some encouragement from an angel who knows Mortimer well and some of Toria's own talents in the kitchen along with her outgoing personality to turn this situation around. It's going to be a rocky road to a happy ending for this couple, not because of outside dangers but because of Mortimer's difficulties in letting the image of his first wife go. We'll run into several now old friends again, watch a young man face his own demons and win, as well as move the series along with mention of other characters we'll meet along the way. I had fun with Mail Order Merchant and would recommend this story and series to any Western Historical Romance reader who enjoys a good love story, likable characters, and that special magic that surrounds a couple who is perfect for each other – once they realize it that is.

I read this title through my Kindle Unlimited subscription.

A very enchanting story

A story of a woman with more energy and initiative than I could imagine. Fighting the idea of seeing a ghost would make me feel crazy. This story is wonderful. I couldn't put it down. Beckham has the best brides.

Toria and Mortimer

Toria is a 32-year-old spinster who is being hounded by her recently widowed boss to marry him. When he accounts her in an alley she is saved by the butler of her niece, a matchmaker. Mortimer is the owner of the mercantile in Creede. He lost his wife 5 years before and is starting to get lonely. After talking to his friend he decides to send away for a mail order bride.

When Toria arrives in Creede, she sees that her new husband is unhappy with her. Will she be able to prove her worth and get Mortimer to love her or will she be as unhappy as a wife as she was as a spinster? Her guardian angel will have something to say about it.

Tammy Rolle says

Their guardian angel

Another Kristen Osbourne winner. It's truly amazing how she manages to keep all of these story lines straight. She weaves her characters in and out of her many series with a skill that is truly unique. If it says Osbourne on the cover, I'm reading it. Tori and Mortimer's journey to love is a delightful tale. I highly recommend it.

Penny Albee says

Wonderful story!

I love visiting Creede! Ms. Osbourne created characters that have such depth, they seem real! If you haven't read this series yet you are really missing out!!!

Anita Rohn says

Angel

Believe and follow your intuition. Creede, Colorado needs people who dream and work hard and families to make it a home and the Angel's help to set them on their path. Humor and emotions make for interesting story telling.
